

Dirk Van Tuerenhout to Speak on "Discovering the Civil War"

Our next meeting is Thursday, January 19 at 7:00 pm in Anderson Hall, Room 103, on the Academic Mall at the University of St. Thomas. The program will be presented by Dr. Dirk Van Tuerenhout, Curator of Anthropology at the Houston Museum of Natural Science. His topic is on the current museum exhibit, "Discovering the Civil War."

This exhibit draws upon letters, diaries, photos, petitions, and patents from The National Archives to paint a picture of life as it was from the years immediately preceding the war through Reconstruction, which ended in 1877.

Dr. Tuerenhout writes, "I plan on reviewing the exhibit and taking people through the various components that make up the entire show:

1. Discovering the Civil War, as organized by the National Archives
2. The John L Nau collection of Civil War artifacts
3. The story of the USS Westfield."

The exhibit from the National Archives is divided into 12 areas that combine great original treasures, touch screen interactives and social media tools, to illustrate the breadth of the conflict and to ask, "How do we know what happened?" Each area is anchored by an original document, and all the records become powerful tools that let visitors consider and ask questions about evidence, listen to a wide variety of voices, and make up their own minds about the struggle that tore apart these United States.

Houstonian John L. Nau, III, has amassed one of the largest private collections of Civil War historical artifacts in the country. For the first time ever, an array of these documents, letters, photos, weapons, military accoutrements, equipment, and uniforms will be on display, giving visitors a vivid glimpse into the world of the courageous soldiers willing to sacrifice their lives. This section of the exhibition is organized by the Houston Museum of Natural Science and the Nau Civil War Collection.

The third portion of the exhibit is dedicated to the battle for control over the port of Galveston and, in particular, the role played by the USS Westfield. Scuttled in 1862, and dynamited in 1906, the ship was rediscovered in 2005 and excavated in the following years.

Visitors will learn where the ship was built, the brief role it played in the West Gulf Blockading Squadron, and how it met its demise in the waters around Galveston. The Naval History and Heritage Command Underwater Archaeology Branch provided some of the items recently retrieved from the wreck site with the help of U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Galveston District and ably restored by the Center for Maritime Archaeology and Conservation at Texas A&M University.

Dr. Van Tuerenhout (above) is responsible for the museum's collections and exhibits dealing with human culture. He graduated with M.A. degrees in Anthropology and Art History from Katholieke Universiteit in Belgium, and received his Ph.D. in anthropology from Tulane University. As a scholar and educator, Dr. Van Tuerenhout enjoys using the museum's exhibits as a platform for outreach, to share insights in cultures that are on display.

Be sure to be with us on January 19th. This is going to be a great program!

President's Message

Meeting Reminder

Place: University of St. Thomas (UST)

Where: Anderson Hall; Room 103

Time: 7:00-9:30 P.M.

Happy New Year to everyone! Thank you for all the support provided during my recovery. I very much appreciate each of those who stepped in to keep things up and running in my absence.

I am sure everyone is wondering about the status of our new website. A draft website is currently being constructed for the board to review for final changes pre-initiation. Unfortunately, it is taking a little longer than expected as I have not received as much input from the members as I had expected. There is still time to get your favorite photos, short anecdotes outlining your personal experiences or event descriptions from past projects. Please, please email me all that you have to offer before February 1, 2012. The information can be added to the final website just before it goes public.

We hope to be working not only on our own project this year, but also with neighboring historic and/or archaeological organizations. There are multiple projects that will require volunteers--seasoned and unseasoned--as the weather allows and I hope everyone will be available to jump in with both feet to participate.

Hope to see you at the upcoming meeting.

-- Karen Belvin, President

Two Great TAS Archeology Workshops Coming Up

The Texas Archeological Society will sponsor the Texas Archeology Academy titled "Lithics: Reading Stone Artifacts," February 4-5, 2012, in Uvalde, Texas. This workshop will provide hands-on experience in the recognition of stone artifacts, their manufacture, and how they contribute to our understanding of ancient people. Classes will be held at Quality Inn in Uvalde, 920 E. Main, 9:00 am to 4:00 pm each day. Registration deadline for this workshop is January 22, 2012.

"Ceramics: The Stories Found in Pottery" will be held at Texas A&M University in College Station March 3 and 4, 2012. This academy will impart the importance of archeological ceramics in terms of technology, chronology, dating, trade, subsistence, and cultural identity. Registration deadline for this workshop is February 22, 2012.

Lectures and hands-on exercises for both workshops will be provided by Dr. Harry Shafer. The registration fee for each workshop is for two days instruction: TAS member $95; non members, including individual membership $155; non member including family membership $165; student non-member including membership $135. That includes lunches (2) and a manual on CD. A certificate of participation will be awarded to attendees. CPE credit will be available for teachers as approved by the Texas SBEC.

Friends of Archaeology to Host John Buxton of "Antiques Roadshow"

John A. Buxton, ISA CAPP, will speak at the Friends of Archaeology meeting at 5:00 pm, Sunday, February 5, 2012 in Anderson Hall on the campus of St. Thomas University. Buxton, a frequent appraiser on "Antiques Roadshow," will speak on "Appraising Archaeological material – Public and Private."

According to Buxton, "appraising archaeological material both publically on Antiques Roadshow and privately for estate or charitable donation purposes offer very different and unique challenges. The world of archaeology is changing rapidly both with the technology of the internet and scientific advances in authentication. Ultimately the question is how far do we need to go to meet the standards of due diligence of today and of the future? What was acceptable twenty years ago is certainly not acceptable now. What will the standards be twenty years from now in 2032. It might be wise to consider these issues as we plan for the future regardless of your perspective on collecting, researching, or repatriating."

New Book Available on History of Bernardo Plantation

I'd like to encourage those of you who are interested in the early history of Texas to take a look at Jim Woodruff's new book: Bernardo: Crossroads, Social Center and Agricultural Showcase of Early Texas [Paperback]. Jim is our project historian, and I think he's done a terrific job of capturing the Bernardo Plantation and placing it in historical context.
